large hall. The best they can expect is two-thirds of capacity. So when thousands of Indians arrive, the atmosphere goes suddenly from genteel New York to bustling Calcutta. There is some raving and ranting but eventually the show goes on — without the groups of NRIs who hang around disconsolately outside the hall.

head gear providing a refreshing change that is the norm in UN-land.

The Indians are scattered all over and at the Pierre (Taj-owned), which But there's a fair number of...
